ACADEMIC COMMON MARKET

The Academic Common Market is a cooperation developed among 16 states to help students cut the costs of undergraduate and graduate study at out-of-state universities. The Academic Common Market allows participating students to pay in-state tuition rates while studying outside their home states.

Because the state of Arkansas has no ALA-accredited library and information studies master’s degree program, library and information studies is one of the programs for which Arkansas residents are eligible. Arkansas residents may attend the School of Library and Information Studies at the University of Oklahoma and pay in-state tuition rates because of the Academic Common Market arrangement.

There are only two requirements for participation:

1. Gain acceptance into the School of Library and Information Studies graduate degree program at the University of Oklahoma.
2. Provide proof that you are a legal resident of Arkansas.

Taking advantage of the Academic Common Market agreement is easy. First, enroll in the library and information studies program at the University of Oklahoma. Then write your Academic Common Market state coordinator for official certification of residency.
